What's wrong with the world today?

- People identify problems such as war, poverty, inequality, climate change, and injustice.
- Religious believers may say these issues are caused by human selfishness and turning away from God.
- Some believe people have a duty to help fix these problems through love and compassion.

Isaiah and God's judgement

- Isaiah was an Old Testament prophet who warned that injustice and disobedience would lead to God's judgement.
- He also gave hope, saying that God would send a saviour to bring peace and justice.
- Isaiah challenged people to care for the poor and live righteously.

Recent or living prophets

- Some Christians believe God still speaks through people today.
- Examples include Martin Luther King Jr., Desmond Tutu, and Malala Yousafzai.
- These figures have spoken out against injustice and worked for peace, equality, and human rights.

Historical prophets today

- Historical prophets like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Amos are still influential.
- Their messages about justice, repentance, and faithfulness inspire people today.

- Many faith leaders and believers use these teachings to speak out against wrongdoing.

Who is responsible for promoting justice and truth?

- Christians believe everyone shares responsibility to stand up for justice and speak the truth.
- Religious leaders, governments, and ordinary people all have a role to play.
- The Bible teaches that loving your neighbour includes working for fairness and peace.

What steps could people take to bring peace?

- People can forgive, listen, and work together to solve problems.
- Praying, campaigning, educating others, and living peacefully all contribute to peace.
- Religions often teach that peace starts with individuals acting with love and kindness.

Big Questions

- 1) What are the biggest problems in the world today, and what causes them?
- 2) What can we learn from prophets like Isaiah about justice and hope?
- 3) Can anyone be a prophet in today's world?
- 4) Who should take responsibility for making the world a better place?
- 5) What practical steps can people take to promote peace and justice?
